WABASH WILL CONTROL.

Gould's Eastern Lines Now Run by Wabash.

New York, Jan. 9.-The general arrangements incidental to taking over the Pittsburg, Carnegle & Western and unifying the Gould lines west of Pittsburg have been completed, according to the Herald, and are ready to be brought before the directors and stockholders of the various companies for approval. It is understood that the plans involve the issuance of new securities and a closer unifiance of new securities and a closer unification of the finances of the Gould roads between Pittsburg, Chicago and St. Louis. The Pittsburg, Carnegie & Western syndicate will be wound up and the property placed under the direction of the Wabash, together with the Wheeling & Lake Erie, and probably the Ann Arbor. But the scheme does not involve the unification of the entire Gould system, having in view merely the consolidation of the Gould properties in the central States and Pennsylvania.

With the completion of the Pittsburg-and Tacoma seems to have reached the point where both parties are willing to make a deal, but cannot agree on terms. When President Mellen of the Northern Pacific was in Portland over a year ago he said that his company was quite willing, and there is no reason to believe that ne said that his company was duite whiting, and there is no reason to believe that the policy has been changed since Mr. Elliott became president. Mr. Harriman has expressed the same disposition on the part of the Oregon Railway & Navigation, but the statement of President Mohler of the Oregon Railway & Navigation since his return from the East indicates that no progress has been made. Under the suggested scheme the Northern Pacific would escape the heavy haul over the Cascade mountains, and on the other hand the Oregon Railway & Navigation would be able to haul freight and passengers through to the Sound without breaking bulk or changing cars. It is probable that each party to the deal maintains that what it has to offer is worth more than it would receive, so that they find it impossible to get together.

A cold seems such a simple anair to many people, yet every case of consumption pneumonia has its beginning in a "simple" cold.

Those who value their lives should not treat a cold or cough as a simple affair, but use a reliable medicine while it is possible to effect a cure. There is an infallible remedy for colds, coughs, hoarseness, and all throat and lung affections: the celebrated

A "Simple" Cold Which Led To Consumption. "Three years ago a young friend of mine, John Young, a chairmaker, caught a heavy cold and I wanted him to try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, but he laughed and said it was only a 'simple cold.' His cough got worse and he died Thanksgiving Day with consumption, and was buried to-day. I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and think it the best remedy on the market. I always recommend it to my friends. If people would only take it in time, there would not be half of the throat and lung diseases in this world that there are to-day. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It should be in every house." S. H. Maddox, 813 E. King St., York, Pa.

One Bottle Cured a Bad Cold.

"I suffered a great deal from colds and could not sleep for coughing, and tried nearly every cough syrup there is made. A friend asked me to use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. I bought a bottle and it cured me of my bad cold. If everyone having a very bad cold would use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup they would be convinced that it is the best to be had." Harry L. VanVliet, 163 N.
